Index of Rulers

Because of the multiplicity of forms, stylings and naming traditions, and the attendant confusion as to what constitutes a Western style "last name," the names of rulers are not inverted. This index of rulers is arranged alphabetically. In many cases, where the entry is a long one in the bulk of the book, the ruler's basic dates are given, as a locating aid. Names are alphabetized under all reasonable permutations, eliminating the need for cross-referencing. Each name has a bold letter in it, representing the place where that ruler would be found in a more traditional inverted index. Names after "ibn" in multipart names are not listed alphabetically, as this means "son of."

The Arab forms ad-, al-, an-, ar-, as-, ash-, at-, and az- are treated as the English "the," and therefore not indexed at all in their place under "a." The name "al-Asi," for example, will be found under "Asi," but listed as "al-Asi," with the "A" of "Asi" in bold.

The honorifics Haj, al-Haj, Hajji, al-Hajj, and similar forms indicate a man who made the pilgrimage to Mecca, and are therefore titles, not names as such. Unless the name Haj or a variation thereof forms an integral part of a ruler's name, such as Alhaji, or al-Hajj (which, because that was the ruler's full name, will be found indexed under H), names are not alphabetized by these titles. The same practice is observed for Sa'id, Sa'd, Sayid, Seyid, and other forms; Sheikh, Shehu, and other forms; Sid, Sidi, and other forms; and Mallam. These titles are listed alphabetically where appropriate, but the bold letter will again show the correct name of the ruler.

For ease of reference, this index has been alphabetized by word, rather than by letter. So, for example, all the "Abd" entries appear before the "Abdallah" entries, even though on a letter by letter basis "Abdallah" would come before "Abd al-Malik."

Alphabetization follows the following pattern: all Abdallahs (for instance) are arranged alphabetically according to country, then chronologically when there are two or more from the same country. After the Abdallahs come the names in which Abdallah forms the last of two or more components, e.g. "Yahya Abdallah" or "Hassan Yakub Abdallah." In these cases it is the very first letter of the person's name that determines his/her position in the order. After this group come the Abdallahs who have a number after their names, e.g. "Abdallah I" or "Abdallah IV," arranged numerically, so that all rulers with the name "Abdallah II" are arranged together, and immediately after them come those with additional names after the number, such as "Abdallah II al-Hatim." Next comes "Abdallah III," then "Abdallah III Hazarmard," and so on. After this group come those with a name or names after the "Abdallah" component, e.g. Abdallah ibn Suleiman. These are arranged alphabetically, the key word being that after the name "Abdallah."

The following should be noted:

The Arabic-based "Abd al-" followed by another name can also be found under "Abdul," or "Abdel." For Abdul (the English version of Abd al-), and Abdel (the French version), see Abd al-.

The Arabic-based "Abd ar-" followed by another name, for example "Abd ar-Rahman," can also be found as "Abdarrahman," "Abderrahman" or "Abdurrahman."

Abu Bakr, Abu-Bakr, Abu Bakar, Abubakar, Abubakr, Abu Bekr and Abu-Bekr are all the same in essence.

Names containing the particle "De" or "de" are found in two places, under the letter "D" as well as under the next component of the name. Note: The Spanish, French and Portuguese tend to use "de," while the Dutch and Italians tend to use "De." There is no difference alphabetically. The British are not constant in this regard, such names being from diverse origins anyway.

The Dutch particles "Van" and "Van Der" are indexed under "Van" as well as under the next component of the name. The German-based "von" is listed as such, and also under the next component of the name.
